Bocca, the famous red sofa shaped as giant lips. Getting their inspiration from the 1935 Portrait of Mae West by surreal artist Dalì, as well as from the hot red lips of Hollywood stars, Studio 65 architects achieved a masterpiece destined to become an object of cult. Pop DNA, a sensual and provocative soul, feminine and elegant aspect. Bocca is among the most sought-after, loved, and imitated products of home furniture. Bocca comes in two new versions: Dark Lady e Pink Lady. The first - rebellious, all black and with an oversize piercing - is the transgressive interpretation, with a marked gothic inclination. Voluptuous and of great impact, Dark lady shows its rock spirit. The other version, Pink Lady, comes with a new lipstick of a more glamorous and fashionable colour - fuchsia - which makes it a settee that is even more the object of talk; the ideal setting for a spectacular glittery modernity. The new GOLD edition emphasizes the brand's important landmark, and enriches even further an object welcomed into the most beautiful homes and most important museums in the world.

Zipped Lips! is a special edition of the couch Bocca - designed in 1970 by Studio65 - which is contaminated by the imagination of Moschino's creative director, Jeremy Scott. It is a golden zipper that holds shut the lips of the sensual couch - made of flexible polyurethane and upholstered with fire-red cloth - that in this way takes on a fetish pop touch, which is characteristic of the personal and unpredictable mood of this fashion house.
